WOOLWICH, MAINE: NEMT is pleased to announce the addition of Rick Bisson to the executive team.

Bisson joined the medical transcription company's team on July 5 as the director of business development, responsible for bringing on new clients.

"We're very excited about having Rick as part of the NEMT team," said President Linda Sullivan. "Rick is a highly-accomplished visionary with years of experience in sales, marketing and business development. We're confident that he will help us continue to grow and compete in the rapidly changing world of healthcare information."

Bisson comes to NEMT from Carrabassett Valley Academy in Maine, where he served as the marketing and communications director since 2004 and was directly responsible for increasing international student enrollment by 100 percent in two years.

He got his start in business at the age of 9, helping out at his family's company. From there, he eventually worked his way up to become vice president of Bisson Moving & Storage.

In his new position at NEMT, Bisson will be working to grow NEMT's client base and to develop new business for the company.

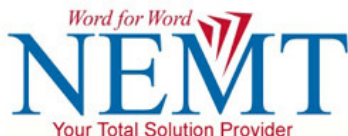

"I'll never sell anything to anybody; I build relationships based on mutual trust," Bisson said, explaining that he focuses on communication and respect and allows the company's stellar reputation to sell itself.

"They'll remember us when it's time to buy," he said.

A lifelong resident of Maine, Bisson lives in Woolwich with his wife, Laurie, and their four children.
